PROMPT

Please submit a 500 to 600 word essay on one of the following topics:

1. Write a lay summary of a scientific paper. You may choose a classic paper or a recently published paper that you find significant. Explain the context and significance of the work, what was done, what was found, and what it means. (Modules 8.3 and 8.4 give tips for writing about science for lay audiences.)
2. Write a lay summary of a paper that you have published in the scientific literature or are currently drafting. Explain the context and significance of the work, what was done, what was found, and what it means. (Modules 8.3 and 8.4 give tips for writing about science for lay audiences.)
3. Write a profile of a professor, scientist, colleague, or fellow student who is conducting original research (science or social science). Interview them about their work; and then write a short piece that includes quotations. Highlight the context and significance of their work, what they are doing, what they have found (so far), and what their findings might mean. Also, feel free to include tidbits about their personal history (e.g., how they got interested in the topic) and personality. (Module 8.5 gives tips for interviewing scientists.)
4. Write the introduction section to a research manuscript that you are currently drafting. (Module 5.5 gives tips for writing introduction sections.)

Recognizing pornographic visual content with object detection

I understand that this topic is quite sensitive, but this is one of my upcoming research manuscript publications with some modifications to fit with the introduction criteria that were taught in this course. I am from a country that does not use English as the main language so there might be some errors in grammar or word choices in my writing and I would love if you can point out these errors or limitations for me to improve my writing skill. Please don't too harsh about this. I'm very grateful for evaluating my writing. Thank you in advance. Have a good day

I would suggest to split this sentence in two as it is rather long and includes words that could be simplified (e.g. "uncostliness" = cheap) However, this simple and uncostliness approach came with disadvantages, which are depending heavily on the quality and resolution of input image; misclassifying safety images that contain a skin-like object or vast amount of exposed body skin; or suffering from high false-positive prediction.

Provide any additional feedback for the writer in the box below.

The essay is well written and easy to follow for a lay audience. I would suggest to keep sentences shorter in order to increase readability. Overall very well done, congrats!
